I think that we are on the same page in many ways and also use different terminology in many ways, and I am hopeful (as in "I hope the sun will come up tomorrow") we will learn to communicate as everybody understands.

Thank you both for trying to get on the same page and order our plans together.

Can we start with terminology?

We do have a little "fire to put out" = we need to address public appearance and I will "take the blame" I already apologized to Pricilla.

That group is not a committee. They are not decision makers for anything other than helping make sure that the form doesn't contain a careless mistake because one of us overlooked something and sent it out to 40 people and now we have to send it again with another note, or that Google is actually inaccessible or unreliable.. this kind of thing. As volunteers of time and energy they are giving feedback. Google forms, if there is a platform on the planet designed to be used by anybody with any ability or disability. This is billions of dollars and people giving us a free service for data collection.

Please consider a quick email response to that group of volunteers that thanks them for their feedback to see if there are spelling errors, or if Google is actually a bad way for us to collect data. This will clarify to everybody on that list that we are simply grateful for their time and when we decide to actually poll the membership they will be notified. Then meanwhile we can also put together a list of questions or terms so we can communicate together? I am sure that we do not want to have the appearance of not wanting to hear back from anybody in the membership about their opinions for the conference. This is the little fire to put out.

Chip,

Your technical knowledge is outstanding and greatly appreciated. However, my response to your beta testing the survey with a committee which was unknown to me was a shock! I didn't even know one of the individuals and I don't see name as member, but perhaps a very recent addition.

Let's take a day to evaluate our needs and completions. We don't need to duplicate our efforts.

Later,
